Local congregations may clip and publish these cartoons in publications circulated among their church members without securing permission. Publication in denominational and general religious periodicals without permission is prohibited.

The Laughs Go On

The church has a serious mission in the world, yet there is much to laugh about. You will find these glimpses of church life just as funny and wholesome as the cartoons in the previous books in this series. They are designed to add sparkle to your church bulletins and newsletters. Just clip and publish these cartoons to put a little spice and variety into your church publications.

Now that hundreds of these cartoons have been published in Baker's Instant Cartoons series, I am curious about which ones have drawn the most chuckles in your church. Write and let me know which cartoons have been most popular in your congregation. This will help me in selecting material for future books of Instant Cartoons. The address is Baker Book House, P. O. Box 6287, Grand Rapids, MI 49516.

About the Cartoonists . . .

Doug Gray is a professional illustrator and cartoonist who lives in Fairfax, Virginia. His cartoons have appeared in a number of national publications, including The Saturday Evening Post, Highlights for Children, and Personnel Journal.

Charles Cartwright was a pioneer in the field of religious cartooning. He began creating church cartoons at the suggestion of his own pastor more than thirty years ago. His work appeared in such prestigious publications as The Saturday Evening Post and Bennet Cerf's 100 Best Cartoons of All Times. Although he is deceased, his cartoons are still distributed by Al Smith Feature Service of Zephyrhills, Florida.

Joe McKeever is known as the "preaching cartoonist," since he is a pastor by vocation who enjoys poking fun at the humorous side of church life. He serves as pastor of the First Baptist Church of Kenner, Louisiana. His cartoons have been published in numerous Christian magazines as well as the previous six books in Baker's Instant Cartoons series.
